EVENTS TO-DAY.

To The New York Herald: As you say, the large majority of hunting accidents are caused by men inexperienced in woodcraft, but, what is more important, these men have also lacked the knowledge or genius of the huntsman. A man may be a fine shot and possess knowledge of woodcraft and yet lack entirely those qualities which make a keen hunter. I have known fine marksmen who, lacking control of nerves and powers of observation, are not fitted to use in the hunting field the modern high powered rifle.
